Wood Well Imitated.

This revolutionary change in sleeping car construction is less than fifteen years old. It was followed by an almost complete eleimination of wood in a Pullman car. Mahogany, Circassion walnut, maple and other fine-grained woods are imitated, and it is said that passengers often take them for wood and use their knuckles to convince themselves by sound when their eyes fail them.

The earliest Pullmans were lighted by candles. Then came oil lamps, gas by candles. Then came oil lamps, gas and finally electricity. Officials say that as long as only the lamps were available there was no criticism from the public, and that an intensity of two-foot candles at a reading level
